Who needs cover?

Life and critical illness insurance is the foundation of any in-depth financial planning; protection cover should be in place if you're...

- Single
There are many reasons on why a single person should have life and/or critical illness cover, whether its to insure against a large debt i.e., mortgage, or if you have dependants who rely on you financially, having sufficient life insurance in place provides peace of mind that your loved ones are protected and your affairs are in order.
- Married
Life insurance is an important factor if you and your spouse combine incomes, sometimes the surviving spouse's income may not be enough to pay off debts such as a home loan, credit card balances and car loans.
- Retired
The proceeds of a life insurance policy are payable immediately, allowing your heirs to take care of taxes, funeral costs and any debt without having to hastily liquidate other assets.
- A parent
If one or both parents die prematurely or suffer an accident, it is worth making considerations so you have a healthy financial safety net in place to secure your children's future standard of living.
- A business owner
Owning a business comes with its own expenses, a loss of a key person in the business can have a large financial impact but having a protection plan in place will reduce the impact financially and mentally.

How much will it cost?

It's not as expensive as you might think

Term insurance is the most cost effective way of providing life insurance cover against death or a serious illness. Whilst cover never acquires a surrender or maturity value, it does provide invaluable peace of mind.

Monthly premiums start from as a little as USD 25.00 per month however, the amount you need to pay will depend upon your age, gender, health, occupation and the level and type of cover required.

*For example, a 34 year old, non-smoking male could secure USD 250,000 of life or earlier critical illness cover for just under USD 85.00 per month. That is less than USD 3.00 dollars a day.

*Based on a 20 year term for a UAE resident.
